Capelli Stool

TWO HALVES MAKE A SEAT

Designer Carol Catalano entwined the fingers of her hands, and a new idea was born. She incorporated that straightforward, strong connection in her Capelli stool. It consists of two identical laminated wood pieces with undulating “fingers” molded at the top that interlock without tools or fasteners. As the surfaces between the fingers meet they become stops that hold each half of the stool firmly in place for an ingeniously stable and remarkably strong structure. The stool separates into two halves that stack conveniently together for easy storage.
