Eames® Tandem Sling Seating

A GREAT TRAVELING COMPANION

Chances are you've already experienced Eames tandem sling seating. Originally designed by Charles and Ray Eames for Chicago's O'Hare International Airport in 1962, it still reliably serves the thousands who pass through there every day. The sleek, contemporary design remains in style for all kinds of public transportation stations. Around the world, people find Eames tandem seating a comfortable, inviting place to wait. And terminal operators appreciate its flexibility, durability, and easy maintenance.

FITTING THE SPACE

Seats and tables attach in any order to a polished-aluminum support beam. Up to seven seats or tables can be configured on a beam. Seats can also be arranged back to back. With so many configuration options, seating can easily conform to facility needs.

SERVING THE PUBLIC

Wide, padded seats and an open seat-to-back angle keep travelers comfortable. The support beam design leaves plenty of room under the seats for baggage.

MADE FOR HEAVY, 24-HOUR USE

Continuous, joint-free die-cast aluminum chair frames and support beams provide maximum strength. Pads are polyurethane foam pressed and sealed between two layers of vinyl for a durable, wrinkle-free surface. There are no stitch lines to gather dust. Seat and back pads are the same size and interchangeable. Along with arm pads, they can be replaced on site.
